

Alan Thompson

Managing Director, hi-impact consultancy

Following a ten-year career as a classroom teacher, Alan Thompson started working as a consultant with Schools, Local Councils, Learning Networks and Government Education Departments both nationally and internationally. He is now Managing Director of award-winning hi-impact consultancy based in the North West of England.

The 34 strong team at hi-impact support educators all over the UK and abroad in their planning and delivery of Computer Science and the effective integration of innovative technologies across the curriculum to enrich and enhance teaching and learning at all ages. Working through long-term Service Level Agreements enables the team to be instrumental in the strategic mapping of the curriculum, school development planning, teacher training and pupil workshops.

hi-impact regularly partners with a number of agencies and educational institutions both nationally and internationally to plan large-scale projects that push the boundaries of how innovative technologies are used in education.

More recently, the innovative tools used by hi-impact have drawn attention from beyond the education sector and the client list now includes Manchester United, Tommy Hilfiger, Sunseeker Yachts and Corinthia Hotels.
