

Dr Lee Anne Murphy PhD PAg

Executive Director - Manitoba Agri-Health Research Network Inc (MAHRN)

Lee Anne serves as the first point of contact for Manitoba's vibrant functional food, food ingredient and natural health product sector. As Executive Director of the Manitoba Agri-Health Research Network Inc (MAHRN), Lee Anne coordinates the research, development and commercialization of agricultural products for health. She leads MAHRN's interaction with growers, industries and institutions at the local and international level and manages MAHRN's test marketing company, NuEats Food Innovation. A proud graduate of the University of Manitoba, Lee Anne combines a solid technical background with extensive experience in the not for profit and private sectors. The Murphy's operate a multigenerational farm in Fort Whyte, Manitoba where they conduct crop research, produce the world's best garlic and serve as reluctant hosts for thousands of Canada Geese during their fall migration.
